SCRIPT/QUESTIONS - (minimum 10 Questions and Answers) (10 points)

OJ: Hello, I am currently at El Mar, the legendary seafood restaurant, located in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, to meet the amazing Mr. Heimer - the cook that can make his lobsters and fish cook themselves into delicious seafood dishes. Well, I hope my 47 hour boat ride pays off. There he comes!

Mr. Heimer: Who are you, and what are you doing in my ship! We are Closed for today cant you read?

OJ: Mr. Heimer, my name is oliver james, and I am a freshman at the culinary school of seafoods for cool doods. I am, and the whole world is amazed at your ability to make your ingredients cook themselves into food. I would like to

Mr. Heimer: I'm not interested. Shoo, Scram, I need my rest

OJ: Please Mr. Heimer! I just need one interview! Cooking is my passion, just as it is yours. It is my dream to become the number one cook in the world

Mr. Heimer: okay do it quick.

OJ: Thank you for joining us. So Mr. Heimer, when did you first learn about your amazing ability?

Mr. Heimer: As a child, I was raised in Congo; a nasty humid, mystical place of wild, untamed animals and vast savannas. One day, I was hiking and stumbled upon a small berry, no larger than the size of a grape. Being the curious boy that I was, I ate it. Then, from that day onwards, I suddenly began to communicate with animals.

OJ: Wow, which animals can you converse with?

Mr. Heimer: Any kind of animal. whether or not they are amphibious, mammalian, reptilian, insectal, or what not. I can talk and reason with all living things.

OJ: Amazing!

Mr. Heimer: once, in Congo, I convinced a hungry tiger from eating a small baby child of a tourist mother. Have you not heard of Chad Heimer, the boy who tamed the tiger?

OJ: No... I haven't. It seems that you were destined to do great things?

OJ: Then, why did you become a chef?

Mr. Heimer: Haha, I am no chef. I just convince animals to kill themselves by giving them a false image of an amazing afterlife. You see, I do not cook, they cook themselves.

OJ: Interesting.

Mr. Heimer: I decided to run a restaurant because I love seafood, and I find it very easy convincing stupid sea animals to cook themselves to sate our tastebuds.

OJ: How do you do that?

Mr. H: Well, its very simple really, animals are very gullible. Especially Seacreatures. They know nothing other than the little sea world that they live in. They are narrow minded. Mammals are somewhat more intelligent - they perceive the world as do humans, and interact with us. Hence they are more enlightened to the world than are sea animals.

OJ: Wow, thats cool

Mr. H: But sea animals, you see, are stupid! And wana know something else? they are depressed living in the dark blue sea. Just imagine having to see everything in blue! blue here, blue there, your life is just dark, blue, congregation of masses! So, I promised them something: an afterlife, a new bright world

OJ: uh huh

Mr. H: and the only way they may reach this perfect world, is if they sacrifice their lives to us humans so that we may savor their juices.

OJ: Oh, My.

Mr. H: That's right.

OJ: WOW Mr. Heimer, you are truly a genius. So in my hand I have a prawn. Can I ask you to make a quick dish out of it really quick?

Mr.H: Easy. here goes.

OJ: We can see here, Mr. H is staring hard into the eyes of the prawn. He's speaking some jibberish, oh and look, the prawn has just thrown itself onto the fryingpan! it is seasoning itself with spices! its writhing and twisting in pain! now, its.. dead.

Mr. H: Oh, butter barbequed prawns, my specialty.

OJ: Wow, amazing. mm it tastes delicious!

Mr. H: Oh, as I've said, it's very easy. I can convince any seacreature to do what this little prawn just did for you.

OJ: To test your abilities, I was polite enough to bring in another sea- ingredient.

Mr.H: Bring it in, what would you like me to cook, pasta? grilled barbeque? sushi? you name it.

OJ: Bring in the Giant Kraken squid!

Mr. H: Oh my goodness its enormous. Hey, wait a minute..

OJ: Sushi sounds good. let me just unleash it from the cage.

Mr.H: No, No stop! I forgot to tell you, squids do not have brains! They dont reason or think!

OJ: Whaat?!

Mr.H: It's impossible to control them! Agh it's attacking us!

OJ: AAAHH!!!!
